Norco 325 Mg-7.5 Mg Tablet Uses - Purdue Cart: Acetaminophen and hydrocodone are the two active components in the combination drug Norco. Hydrocodone is an opioid painkiller, whereas acetaminophen is a fever reducer and pain reliever.

For the treatment of moderate to fairly severe pain, Norco is often given. It is usually employed in cases where other pain management techniques have proven ineffective or inappropriate for the patient.

As an opioid, hydrocodone reduces pain perception by attaching to opioid receptors in the brain and spinal cord. Acetaminophen lowers fever and increases the effects of hydrocodone.

Norco can be habit-forming and, if used improperly, can result in dependence or addiction, so it's crucial to use it with caution and under a doctor's supervision. Furthermore, If acetaminophen is taken in excess or for an extended length of time, it may harm the liver. Never deviate from your doctor's recommendations and take Norco for longer than is recommended.
